

Animal Farm by george orwell
Anticipation guide

All people are created equal.

Some people are more equal than others.

Society would be improved if everyone earned equally, and wealth was distributed evenly.

We should tax those who earn more according to their ability, and distribute wealth evenly to others according to their need.

Talented, intelligent and ambitious people are the most qualified leaders because they know best what people need.

Those who are less intelligent or average should yield to the authority of qualified leaders.

Average people do not always know what is in their own best interest.

I can trust those in positions of authority to make decisions in my best interest.

- parents
- teachers
- principals
- politicians